

Minnesota Health Equity Networks

The Minnesota Health Equity Networks connect, strengthen, and amplify health equity efforts and community concerns using a regional and relational approach. The Networks are an evolving community of support for local public health, Tribal health, and community organizations to address longstanding and emerging health equity issues.

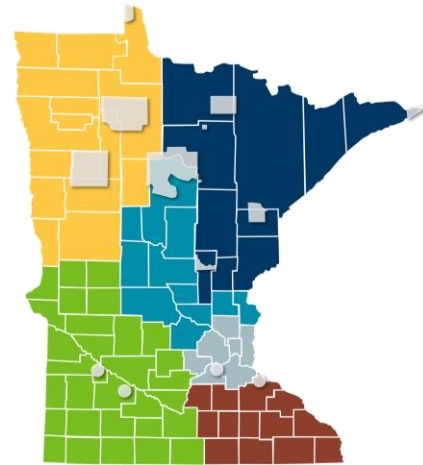

Health equity is achieved when systems truly support all people and communities to have the opportunity to be as healthy as possible no matter who they are or where they live. This requires understanding the social inequities that impact health in each region, and actively working on those inequities.

Every region, community, and Tribal nation experiences different inequities and requires different solutions.

Regional Approach to Health Equity

Regional Network Coordinators work alongside local public health, community organizations, and Tribal partners to:

- Build and nurture relationships with others in the region and across the state
- Support existing work and activities that build capacity
- Provide a space to share knowledge and resources
- Influence system changes to advance health equity
